

Kenneth Lieberthal
Ross School of Business
University of Michigan

Dr. Lieberthal holds several positions at the University of Michigan: William Davidson Professor of Business Administration at the Ross School of Business, Arthur F. Thurnau Professor of Political Science, Distinguished Fellow and Director for China at the William Davidson Institute, and Faculty Associate of the Center for Chinese Studies. He has been on the Michigan faculty since 1983. He earlier taught at Swarthmore College for 1972-83. He has a B.A. from Dartmouth College, and two M.A.'s and a Ph.D. in Political Science from Columbia University.

Dr. Lieberthal is also Nonresident Senior Fellow in Foreign Policy Studies of the Brookings Institution, where he was a Visiting Fellow in Foreign Policy Studies for November-December 2000 and again for the 2004-2005 academic year. Dr. Lieberthal served as Special Assistant to the President for National Security Affairs and Senior Director for Asia on the National Security Council from August 1998 to October 2000. His government responsibilities encompassed American policy toward all issues involving Northeast, East, and Southeast Asia.

Dr. Lieberthal has written and edited nearly a dozen books and authored more than five dozen published articles. His books include: Governing China: From Revolution Through Reform (W.W. Norton, second revised edition 2004); Policy Making in China: Leaders, Structures, and Processes (Princeton University Press, 1988) and Policy Making in China's Energy Sector (U.S. Department of Commerce, 1986), both co-authored with Michel Oksenberg; Bureaucracy, Politics, and Decision Making in Post-Mao China (U.C. Berkeley Press, 1991), co-editor with David Lampton; Revolution and Tradition in Tientsin (Stanford University Press, 1980); Paths to Sino-US Cooperation in the Automotive Sector (US Trade Development Program, 1989), with Michael Flynn and others; and Central Documents and Politburo Politics in China (University of Michigan, 1978). His recent articles include: "Scorched Earth: Will Environmental Risks in China Overwhelm Its Opportunities?" (with Elizabeth Economy) Harvard Business Review (June 2007); "Smooth Sailing: The Myths and Realities of Sea Lane Security" (with Adm. Dennis Blair), Foreign Affairs (May/June 2007); "China's Strategies and Goals toward Northeast Asia," Asia Policy 3 (January 2007); "Completing WTO Reforms," China Business Review (September – October 2006); China's Search for Energy Security: Implications for US Policy (with Mikkal Herberg) (NBR Analysis: Seattle, April 2006); "Bridging the Gap," Asia Policy (January 2006); "Why the US Malaise Over China?" YaleGlobal Online (January 19, 2006); "US-China Relations"(in Chinese), Caijing (December 2005); "Preventing a War Over Taiwan," Foreign Affairs (March-April 2005), along with several book chapters and also articles in the New York Times, Washington Post, Los Angeles Times, Financial Times, South China Morning Post and other newspapers.

Professor Lieberthal was Director of Michigan's Center for Chinese Studies for 1986-89. He has consulted widely on Chinese and Asian affairs and serves or has served as a consultant for the U.S. Departments of State, Defense, and Commerce, the World Bank, the Kettering Foundation, the Aspen Institute, the United Nations Association and corporations in the private sector. He is a member of the Council on Foreign Relations in New York, the International Institute of Strategic Studies in London, the Cosmos Club in Washington, D.C., and a number of professional organizations.

Dr. Lieberthal is Senior Director for Stonebridge International LLC and serves or has served as a member of the Boards of Directors/Advisors of the National Committee on US-China Relations, the US-China Policy Foundation, the National Bureau of Asian Research, the U.S. Advisory Board of the Council on East Asian Affairs (Seoul), Tsinghua University's Center for China in the World Economy, the Research Center for Contemporary China at Peking University, the CSIS-IIE China Futures Initiative, the Asian Studies Visiting Committee at Harvard University, the East Asian Institute of the National University of Singapore, the William Davidson Institute, The Pyle Center, the Forum on Northeast Asia Security of the National Committee on American Foreign Policy, the China Vitae web site, and as Fellow of the Beijing University Political Development and Government Management Research Institute. He serves on the editorial boards of Asia Policy, China: An International Journal, The China Quarterly, The China Economic Review, Foreign Policy

Bulletin, the Journal of Contemporary China and the Journal of International Business Education. In 2004 he received the University of Michigan's Distinguished Faculty Achievement Award. Since 2004 he has served on the Department of Defense Joint Strategy Review Senior Review Panel.

Dr. Lieberthal's wife, Jane Lindsay Lieberthal, is a former University administrator. He has two sons: Keith and Geoffrey.